Outdoor learning adventures connect young people to the world around them, kindle enthusiasm, and aid in the development of concern for others, community and the environment. Outdoor experiences provide for self-discovery, self-expression and enjoyable learning that is stimulating and fulfills positive educational outcomes.

about rieea

The Rhode Island Environmental Education Association is comprised of a group of people committed to environmentally oriented education. The membership includes teachers, naturalists, environmental organizations, and educators from universities, recreation centers, and state, federal, and non-profit environmental education

Environmental education is a process that develops knowledgeable citizens who are concerned about the interconnected natural and human-designed environments in which they live and rely upon for life. Environmental education fosters awareness of responsibility toward the environment; competence to participate in environmental problem-solving and decision-making; and the motivation to act on behalf of others.
